PHYSICAL PAIN OR DEATH

A paragraph is going the rounds in the papers giving the opinion of Lord Bacon and others, that the pain of harging is inconsiderable. It is asserted, for example that after a momentary feeling of sufficient, by the colors dance before the eyes and stretch away into vistas of indescribable loveliness. There is no roasun to doubt the truth of this declaration, because numerous instances have occurred of persons being cut down before life was extinct; and it was on the authority of well authenticated examples of this character that Lord Bacon and others founded their opinion. Moreover, hanging, in its offects an the human organism, produces results very similar to those produced by some natural disease, so that this also affords a critorious stern, or judging. In case of drowning, likewise, the testimony is universal that the physical pain, up to the moment of conciousness being lost, is quiet inconsiderable. The same phenom. quiet inconsiderable.
